STAND UP FOR PUBLIC EDUCATION

Did you know that 95 percent of PSEA-PACE donors contribute less than $100 per year? We rely on voluntary contributions from members just like you to elect and support candidates of any party who support public education. Yes, we do mean candidates of any party. PSEA members just like you evaluate candidates based upon their view of public education – not their political party.

The Race is on for Pennsylvania Governor

Will we have a governor who respects what we do?

Here's how the candidates stack up on the issues that count for PSEA members.

Josh Shapiro

- ✓ Listens to and respects educators and support professionals. [1]
- ✓ Wants to address staffing shortages in our schools by increasing salaries. [2]
- ✓ Will protect school employees' pensions and collective bargaining rights. [3]
- ✓ Will reduce high-stakes standardized testing in public schools. [4]
- ✓ Believes educators deserve to have a strong voice in decisions affecting school curriculum and policies. [5]
- ✓ Initiated and championed a youth violence prevention program that helps students with mental health issues. [6]
- ✓ Wants to make sure our students have the tools they need to succeed. [7]

Doug Mastriano

- ✗ Wants to cut the state's public school funding in half, by more than $10 billion, meaning fewer educators, counselors, and nurses in our schools. [1]
- ✗ Believes schools are overstaffed and educators are overpaid. [2]
- ✗ Supports bills curtailing collective bargaining for fair salaries and benefits. [3]
- ✗ Doesn't think standardized testing is worth mentioning among his priorities.
- ✗ Thinks public education is "broken" and educators are the problem. [4]
- ✗ Wants to force teachers to post online all the instructional materials they use in their classrooms. [5]
- ✗ Supports bills to use public school funding for private and religious school vouchers. [6]
